Fighteen passengers were injured. one of them seriously, shortly before need vesterday when the northbound Hadson Tunnels train they were riding in smashed into the rear of a five car empty train at the temporary terminal of the line at the Twenty-third street station Two devices to mitigate the dangers of collision with which the company had equipped its cars prevented pe serious results of the crash, in the opinion of the officers of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company.

The first explanation of the cause of the collision to be issued from the office of William C. McAdoo, the president of the company, put the blame on George Phillips of 510 Palisade avenue Jersey tity, the motorman of the colliding train. Later when fuller facts were in the posession of the company's officers Vice-President W. C. Fisk issued a statement which said that Phillips's train was coming down a slight grade into the | wenty-third street station and that he lost control of his train because of his nability to make his controller work. When he discovered that he was unable to turn off the current it was too late to apply the emergency brakes, Mr. Fisk's statement said.
